"RAZZLE-DAZZLE."

A Reporters' Still Hunt After the Mysterious Phrase.

Popular Ideas As to Its Full Scope and Shall the Phrase Eurich the Columns of the Unabridged?

The rangle-dazzle

You hear of it everywhere. It is indoors and out of doors,

It is a persistent mystery and follows us with a mysterious persistency.

EVENING WORLD reporters, fired by a zeal worthy of the cause, set out on its track, determined to chase it out of its word-shadow form and, if it has a common meaning and an inclination to stay in the language, to hunt it into its proper place in the vocabu-

These were the questions with which the city philologists were confronted wherever hey were met this morning:

What, in your best judgment, is the m ing of the phrase "Razzle-Dazzle ?" Do you favor its permanent incorpe into the United States language?

There seemed to be a preponderance of affirmative opinion in answer to the second

Here are some of the repties, showing great diversity as to the interpretation of this new born phrase:

born phrase:

Mayor Grant—I really do not know. It is a weird combination. It razzle-dazzles me to give an interpretation.

Judge Martine—If a person does not know what he is about he is razzle-dazzled. Lawyers frequently razzle-dazzle witnesses. County Clerk Reilly—As there is no razzle-dazzling done in this office we don't recognize such a phrase here. However, it is an expressive combination. If a man gets so tangled up that he does not know what he is doing he is razzle-dazzled.

Alderman Divver—I suppose it's when a man has been on a tear. I saw a picture in The World of a dispidated chap being taken to the station-house between two policemen. The tired-looking party had the razzle-dazzle.

George Slosson, the wizard of the cue—if I could only get at Jake Schaefer in a match game of billiards I could give him the razzledanzie in the most approved fashion.

Eroker Ed Murphy—Razzle-danzie is a the eighteenth used to mean full as a boiled owl. But the 400 don't use it. They say "somewhat screwed," which is English, you know.

Lawyer William F. Howe—When a fellow has got bottled lightning in his brain and can't get it out I guess he is razzle-dazzled.

Eroser E. R. Livermore—When you have been to a dinner where Dr. Chauncey Depew has made several of his brilliant speeches, and have partaken too freely of solid and liquid good cheer, you are apt to awake the next day, feeling decidedly razzle-dazzle.

Alderman Barry—I see people are using the form intend of "beyoott" But I don't A'derman Barry—I see people are using the term instead of "boycott." But I don't think it means just that.

Assistant District-Attorney Dawson—Now you have got me. I don't know. I might make a guess, but you had better ask some younger man.

Assistant District-Attorney Lindsay—Razzle-dazzle means a good old-fashioned drunk.

Lawyer John Graham—I never heard the expression before, but suppose it means something like hocus-pocus. I mean to look it up.

expression before, but suppose it means something like hocus-pocus. I mean to look it up.

Clerk Sparks, of the Criminal Courts—I suppose when a man is on a lark he is razzle-dazzled.

Actor Murphy, who created the razzle-dazzle song—One night after the theatre, after it had sung my razzle-dazzle song, I imbibed a little too much razzle-dazzle juice, and went along Broadway singing the song. I was run in and fined $10. I was razzle-dazzled.

Lawyer Fred Swain—When a man is somewhat under the influence, he naually feels razzled. If he escapes without being dazzled as well he is lucky.

Probate Clerk Tinney—It's when forty men come in here and ask forty questions apiece when I am busy. Then I get razzle-dazzled, and refer them to the Surrogats, who razzle-dazzles them in turn in ahort order.

Administration Clerk O'Brien—When a man is made to believe something that is not so he is razzle-dazzled.

Assistant Administration Clerk Scannell—When a man gets doubled he is razzle-dazzled.

Counsellor Joe Steiner—When you are inzled.

Counsellor Joe Steiner—When you are introduced to a man and he steals your watch he razzle-dazzles you.

Deputy Coroner Conway—When I was a young man I knew what razzle-dazzle meant, but for the last few years I have been out of practice. Possibly, however, during convention time I might still still experience the razzle-dazzles.

Clerk Edward Reynolds—When a man has been having too good a time he is often raz-ale-dazzled.

Secretary Burns, of the Park Department—
I have often heard the term, but really am at a loss to give a definition. When a person does not know what he is about, I presume it may be claimed he is razzle-dazzled.
C. H. Smith, of the Park Department—It is like a razoo. People get the razoo or razzle-dazzle when they have been having too good a time.

Grantce Clerk Lynch—When a man is drunk as a lord he has no regard for anything and will do all sorts of razzle-dazzle things.

Broker P. t. Weaver—When one has been out all night, painting the town red, so to speak, he is apt to feel "rocky" when he gets home—in other words he is razzle-dazzled.

Broker S. O. Cadwell—The condition of the stock market in Wall street is a razzle-dazzle.

Broker Louis Marks—When a man gets mixed he may be said to be razzle-dazzled.

Broker Waiter Smith—Ask Cleveland what a razzle-dazzle is. He knows. He got one last Fall:

or razzle-dazzle a person was to entangle him.
Mr. E., also a Wall street man, who said he had lived at the Windsor Hotel ten years and wanted this fact duly chronoided, claimed that razzle-dazzle meant hifalutin.
Broker M. said it meant hifalutin.
Broker H. defined it as follows: 'When a gentleman does not know whether he wants a pencake or a gin cocktail he is razzle-dazzled."

a pancake or a gin cocktail he is razzle-darzled."

Broker C. Spencer Boyd—Under the surroundings and impressions of a lurid evening, and when the luridness is continued till the sun rises, a man is likely to feel razzled. When he cools off after a good sleep he is more likely to feel dazzled to think what a fool he has made of himself.

Broker Robert Van Hueson—What do you sak me for? The didoes cut by Ed Murphy after 12 o'clock at night are razzle-dazzlers.

Broker John Helyer—When a man gets off his base he is razzled and dazzled, too.

Broker John Helyer—When a man can't tell the difference between a billiard ball and a ball taken over the bar he is decidedly razzle-dazzled.

Up to this point there had been a voice as of one person to adopt the phrase into the language. Webster's great work was declared to be seriously abridged while lacking this expressive term.

Billy Edwards, ex-champion light-weight puglist—If I plank a man between the eyes or on the jaw I rather think he would be razzle-dazzled for a time, or if a man drinks too much of the sparkling water he is very liable to become slightly under the influence of the razzle-dazzle for a time, or if a man drinks too much of the sparkling water he is very liable to become slightly under the influence of the razzle-dazzle when we made the match for Jake Kilrain to fight John L. Sullivan right under their noses.

Jake Kilrain to fight John L. Bullyan right under their noses.

Arthur T. Lumley of the Hustrated News—I'd just like to razzle-dazzle John L. Sullivan for writing such an infernally long letter this week. Here are four columns which have got to be chopped down to less than two.

Frank Stevenson, the sporting man at 157 Bleecker street—Do I know what razzle-dazzle means? Well, now, if I don't you can have my hat.

dazzle means? Well, now, if I don't you can have my hat.

Billy Ottman, of the St. James Hotel—It's to be skinned. I can't think of any more expressive explanation.

Clerk Simpson, of the St. James—Were you ever guyed? Well, then, you have been razzle-dazzled.

razzle-dazzled.

W. H. Robertson, of 296 Broadway—If you should go to a ball and have your overcoat and hat stolen and your pockets picked, I should say you had been razzle-dazzled in great shape.

"Yes," chimed in L. Levein, the well-known athlete, "and how about the umbrells? You are beaten out of anything nowadays, and you have to console yourself by the charming thought that you are razzledazzled."

by the charming thought that you are razzle-dazzled."

Harry Chapman, the veteran theatrical manager, who is on the other side of sixty—I first heard "razzle-dazzle" about thirty years ago as a gag by Billy O'Neill, an Irish comedian, who was then performing at the old Bowery Theatre. It was used in a farce where O'Neill played the lover and fooled "the ould man," whom he said he had "razzle-dazzled." If my memory serves me rightly, I also heard Tom Riggs, another Irish comedian, use the same term. It wouldn's do to incorperate it in the language. Iske every other slang word, it will die out in a little while.

Mike Kelly, the $10,000 prize beauty and the pet of the baseball community—I first heard "razzle-dazzle" from George Floyd, Nat Goodwin's manager, in Boston, last August or September. The song was originated in California by a social club, who gave it to Charley Hoyt. Noah Webster's spirit would rebel if we should put it in his dictionary.

Miss Ella Rodriguez, soprano singer on the vandeville stage—I heard it need as a gag before the song appeared, but never used it myself. I know the song well and have often sung it. I don't think it sounds good enough for the dictionary.

Will Collina, comedian—I never beard it used on the stage in travelling companies I have appeared with, and it was not until the song came out that the word became commonly used. Being slang, we should not corporate it in our dictionaries.

Gus Heckler, presiding genius at the Bohemia—I first discovered it at the last election, when I ran for Alderman in the

Gus Heckler, presiding genius at the Bohemia—I first discovered it at the last election, when I ran for Alderman in the Eleventh Assembly District and got gloriously defeated. Lexicographers will scarcely adopt the term.

Eugene Wellington, business manager of "The Dark Side of a Great City"—I first heard it seven or eight years ago in the Buckingham, at Louisville, where J. J. Quinlan, of the "Horseshoe Four," used it as a gag. I also heard him use it in this city. It will hardly do for Webster's dictionary.

Harry Cottrell, comedian and singer—Jim Quinlan, of the "Horseshoe Four," used "razzle-dazzle" in a variety performance in this city several years ago, giving it as a gag. There are good enough English words without giving the dictionary the "razzle-dazzle."

Double Suicide?

Coburn's Queer Statement on a Newspaper Margin.

ISPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD. Bosron, March 1. -- A startling tragedy occurred at 258 Highland street, Roxbury, last night. On the third floor of the above number lived Edward Coburn, twenty-eight years old, and his wife. Elizabeth, who was eigh, teen years old.

With them resided Coburn's mother, who s very old. Coburn was a drummer. On the 3d of last July the young couple were married. She was a Catholic and bore the maiden name of Elizabeth Tirrell. Coburn was a Protestant. It is said that the pair have not lived happily together and that there was almost happily together and that there was almost constant quarrelline.

No reason was known for this except their religious differences.

It is claimed that Mrs. Coburn has been subject to hysterical attacks, during which she has threatened to commit suicide.

Last evening about 5 o'clock she came downstairs to the front door, her husband following her.

Mrs. Ellison says Coburn said to her: "I want you to witness that I do not use any violence towards my wife.

"I simply want her to go back upstairs or tell me where she is going."

Then they both went upstairs together.
Soon after the report of a pistol was heard, and Coburn rushed excitedly out, saying to Mrs. Ellison that he was going for a doctor.

Coburn's mother soon followed and went to a neighbor's house, where she said her daughter-in-law had shot herself.

When the officers arrived at the bouse where Coburn lived they found the woman lying on her face dead.

Under and on the right side of her chin was found a bullet hole, from which the blood was flowing.

Coburn had not returned and was not heard of till 8.45 o'clock. At that hour a boy came into Station 10 and said that a man was dead on the roof of the Madison Square Hotel, an apartment-house on the corner of Warwick and Sterling streets.

In proved to be Coburn. He had two bullet-holes just between the eyes.

He evidently intended instant death, but he did not expire until three hours afterwards.

He had in his pocket a copy of a Boston paper, and on the margin he had written these words:

"This is the outcome of a villainous life. May it be a warning to others."

Oh! Good people, don't lay any blame

"This is the outcome of a villainous life. May it be a warning to others.

'Oh! Good people, don't lay any blame on my godly mother. It is my disobedience to her that has done this. Will some one love her for me?"

A 38-calibre revolver by his side, with three chambers empty, told the purpose for which it had been used.

Was Murder Included or Was It a A Consultation of the Company's Officers Disappearance of a Little Girl from Brooklyn's Police Say They Have Proof Held To-Day.

> A Story that He Was Defendant in a Conspiracy Case.

> Considerable excitement was manifested in lowntown business circles this morning by the report of the mysterious disappearance of L. B. Cleveland, President of the A. B. Cleveland Company (Limited), a large seed house at 47 Cortlandt street.

Although Mr. Cleveland has been missing for five weeks, the fact was not made public until this morning, and grave rumors of a defalcation have arisen in consequence.

The mere fact of his absence would not be sufficient to create any particular surprise were it not coupled with the fact that an investigation of his accounts is said to show a cash deficit, the amount of which is va-cash deficit, the amount of which is variously stated to be from $30,000 to $150,000, a good portion of which is recorted to be loans obtained from personal friends.

The discovery of the deficit was first due to the firm demanding payment of a bill from a customer, who had some time before advanced the money by a note to Mr. Cleveland, which the latter had discounted and pocketed the funds, according to reports.

An investigation followed, while Mr. Cleveland was out of the city, and it is said that the sum of $35,000 was collected from various sources by the President, no return of which was ever made to the firm.

The officers of the Company positively refuse to make any statement for publication, and while it is probable that a defalcation has occurred, the true facts must yet remain a mystery.

mystery.

A clerk in the store with whom an Evening A clerk in the store with whom an Evening World reporter conversed at first pronounced the reported defalcation as absurd, but on further questioning would give no astisfactory explanation for Mr. Cleveland's absence, his present whereabouts and his standing in the Company.

"Mr. Cleveland left here to go on a business trp, which was of frequent occurrence. Every one in the place knew he was going, and there was no secrecy about his departure."

ture."

Do you know, then, that he will return?" asked the reporter.

I cannot say."

If there was no pecuniary difficulty, why what is the cause of his prolonged absence?"

I don't know."

Was he on friendly terms with the other members of the Company when he left?"

"I don't care to answer that question."

What then was the cause of his sudden flight?"

flight?' Well, perhaps he didn't care to remain with the Company any longer."
... Couldn't he have left without so much

"Couldn't he have left without so much mystery if that were the case?"

A smile was the reply.

Finally, probably seeing the ridiculous side of his contradictory statements, the clerk gought to end the matter by saying that the whole story was originated by rival seedamen, who were jealous of the Company's success, and took advantage of Mr. Cleveland's absence to spread the report of defalcation.

defalcation.

Mr. Forbes, manager for the firm of Peter Henderson's Sons, the nearest neighbor, laughed at the idea as preposterous.

"We have a certain line of trade which in no way conflicts with the Cleveland Company, and their existence does not trouble us in a business way at all, nor have I heard any such statement from others in the business."

After running a gauntlet of clerks, the reporter reached the counting-room, where he was informed that Mr. George M. Hard the Secretary, and F. B. Stearns, the Treasurer, were in consultation with the bookkeeper, and that they had no statement to make.

A stock-broking firm where Mr. Cleveland is reported to have dropped considerable money, was visited, but the firm denied that any customer of that name was on their books.

any customer of that name was on their books.

Mr. Cleveland is about thirty-eight years old, is married, and his wite is said to be with him, wherever he may be at present. He was formerly in the seed business at Cape Vincent, N. Y. He organized the present Company in this city four years ago.

Much surprise is manifested at his disappearance, as his nature is said to be such as to lead him to tattle against any serious difficulty, and not take refuge in flight.

It is said that Mr. Cleveland was last heard of in St. Louis, the home of Commissioner of Agriculture Colman, and that payment for a large shipment of seeds to the United States Government had not been received by the Company, although overdue.

It is also alleged that Mr. Cleveland was the defendant in a conspiracy suit about to be brought at the time of his disappearance.

FRANK DUDGEON TURNS UP.

ONLY TO BE SUED BY KITTY CODY'S

FATHER FOR $100,000 DAMAGES.

All doubts as to the whereabouts of Frank P. Dudgeon, whom the Grand Jury indicted for aiding in the criminal operation which killed Kitty Cody, were dispelled this morn-

Shortly after 10 o'clock Dudgeon, in company with his counsel, Thomas E. Pearsall, entered the Kings County Court of Sessions. Dudgeon appeared to be somewhat nervous and glanced uneasily about the room.

As soon as the indictment was read Counsellor Pearsail asked Judge Moore for a postponement, and after consulting with the District Attorney Judge Moore adjourned the hearing until Tuesday.

"I presume the defendant is under bail," queried the Judge. To this District Attorney hidgway replied that there was $10,000 in hard cash deposited in the safe in his office.

in hard cash deposited in the safe in his office.

Dudgeon would not say where he had been during the past two weeks while the Brooklyn police have been fearing he had skipped his bail.

As Dudgeon and his counsel were leaving the court-room Counsellor Townsend handed Mr. Pearsall a summons in a suit brought by James Cody, the father of Kitty Cody, against Dudgeon to recover $100,000 damages for betrayal and the loss of his daughter's services.

MISSING CLEVELAND. GRACIE'S GONE. THAT TIE-UP MYSTERY.

The Death of Edward Coburn and The Absent Seedsman Was Last Has She Eloped or Was She Kid- Rearrest of the Three Car Men napped by a Negro?

The Police Report that She Has Le. The Prisoners Arraigned in Court on a vanted with a Clerk, Pretty Gracle Irwin had not returned when an EVENING WORLD reporter called at Miss Caroline F. Smyth's Select Academy for Young Ladies, at 314 West Eighty-fourth street, this morning.

The missing girl is thirteen years of age. She looks older because she is unusually tall and plump for a girl of that age. Miss Smyth, who is her second cousin, is about sixty years old, and has taken care of Gracie since the latter was left an orphan, about eight years ago.

Miss Smyth went out about 4 o'clock yes terday afternoon. A few minutes after she had left a big negro mounted the steps and rang the door bell. Miss I. Lemel, a teacher of German emloyed by Miss Smyth, was in the basement. She went up stairs to open the door, but found that Gracie had anticipated her, having the door already open, and was talking to the colored man.

Miss Lemel caught a good view of the negro's face. She says he was rather good looking and well dressed, but unusually looking and well dressed, but unusually black even for a negro.

As Miss Lemel reached the door, Gracie said "Good-by," and slammed it too.

Then, apparently very much agitated, she turned to the teacher and said:

"Oh Miss Lemel, Auntic Caroline [as she always called the spinster], has met with an accident, and wants me to go to her at once."

an accident, and wants me to go to her at once."

Completely deceived by her candid manner, Miss Lemel, assisted her on with her outer wraps and the girl left the house.

Miss Smyth returned home about 7.80 o'clock last evening. She had met with no accident, and was alarmed beyond measure upon hearing of Gracie's disappearance.

At first she suspected that the negro had abducted the child and sent her brother George to Capt. Berghold, of the West One Hundredth street police station with information to that effect.

After some reflection, however, she changed her mind, and when seen by an Evenne World reporter this morning she was of the opinion that Grecie had eloped.

"What makes you think so?" saked the reporter.

"Many things that have havened within

"What makes you think so?" saked the reporter.

"Many things that have happened within the last few months," she said. "I never had a particle of trouble with Gracie until last December. Then partly through my own fault she made the acquaintance of a man. It is with him that I think she has run off."

"Who is he?" asked the reporter.

"I will not mention his name or that of his employer, who is a well-to-do business man in this part of town.

"Last December I had some tickets to dispose of for a church fair. I sent my Gracie out to sell some of them. I told her to go to the business man. She did so.

"He was not iu, but the young man, his partner, was. He bought some of the tickets, and seemed to become infatuated with Gracie."

pect the true state of affairs, I forbade him the house."

"Which hardly prevented their meetings," suggested the reporter.

"No, it only made matters worse, for I now have reason to believe that they met frequently and secretly outside."

"Is this man married?"

"No, I do not believe he is, Still, he is a base villain. He is many years older than Gracie, and should in honor have left the child alone. Gracie is an unusually bright and attractive girl. I was educating her to musician and speaks and writes German, French and Italian besides the English language."

"It was stated this morning that she was a great heiress, and that she left you because you had not treated her very well; made her wash and cook—and, in last, made her a regular Cinderella. Is that true?" asked THE EVENTING WORLD MAN.

Miss Smyth became greatly excited and vehemently denied the accuration.

"She is not an heiress," she said, "Her father was my first cousin. When he died, Gracie, her sister Sarah and their brothers were left orphans.

"I brought them here, educated fed and clothed them, and treated them as if they were children of my own blood.

"The boys are now in good situations which I secured for them and are boarding downtown. Sarah left me about three years ago to work for herself, being of an independent nature.

"It is not true, as alleged in a morning paper, that she had to leave me because I overworked her. Gracie was never obliged to drudge, although she was always expected to do her share of the household duties."

When asked who the megro was who called for Gracie yesterday Miss Smyth said she believed he was an employee of the man that she suspects of eloping with the girl and that he was sent with a message for the girl to leave home.

Miss Smyth communicated her new view that he was sent with a message for the girl to leave home.

Miss Smyth communicated her new view of the case to the police this morning, and Detectives Feeney and Fitzpatrick were looking for the suspected parties, whose names Miss Smyth had given to them, and their address also. Miss Smyth's academy is situated away down near the banks of the Hudson.

The house is one of a row of old-fashioned frame dwellings. She has twelve scholars and has been at her present abode for nine years.

Her neighbors do not all speak well of her, but this, Miss Smyth says, is due to unfriendly relations that exist between her and some of them.

A member of the Stevens family, who live next door to Miss Smyth, told Policeman Grosjean last night that Gracie had gone into their house and bid them good-by yesterday afternoon, saying she was going away for afternoon, saying she was going away for afternoon, saying she was going away to good.

Mrs. Stevens, an unattractive looking, middle-aged woman, refused to give any additional information when the reporter called on her this morning.

When Gracie left bome she wore a Tam o' Shanter cap, with a tassel, a plush sack that reached the waist, a black ulster, black dress, with a red flounce; buttoned gloves and overshoes.

Charge of Manslaughter.

Kerwan Graham, Morris Stenson and John Collier, the three car-drivers, who were charged with killing Henry W. Adams, who was found dead in Deacon Richardson's stables Jan. 27, during the tie-up, were rearrested to-day by the police of the Eighth Precinct, Brooklyn. The verdict of the Coroner's jury was to the effect that Adams met his death accidentally, and the three men were thereupon discharged. Since then, however, the police have been making further investigations, and they now say they are satisfied that Adams met with foul play. Adams was a descendant of the Adam family of Massachusetts. He was a welleducated man, and for four years past been residing with his brother-in-law, Mr. J. W. Wheelock, at 147 South Elliot place, Brooklyn. For twelve months he had had no work and was on the point of negotiating for a berth on a sea-going vessel when the Deacon's advertisement for 500 Americans to operate his road caught his eye. He decided to apply.

Descon's advertisement for 500 Americans to operate his road caught his eye. He decided to apply.

Deacon Richardson gave him a place as hostier in the Atlantic Avenue stables a few days after the tie-up was declared.

On Sunday night, Jan. 27. Adams and several other men were asleep in the car stables on Ninth avenue and Nineteenth street when a gang of men broke in, and after inducing several of the non-unionists to leave, went away.

A few hours later Adams's body was found in the yard in the rear of the stable with his neck broken. He had been asleep on the second floor.

Coroner Rooney's jury spent three days in hearing evidence and finally brought in a verdict that Adams met his death by accident. The three men were arraigned to-day before Judge Moore and pleaded not guilty. They were remanded.

The charge against them is manslaughter in the second degree.

"Who is he?" asked the reporter.
"I will not mention his name or that of his employer, who is a well-to-do business man in this part of town.
"Last December I had some tickets to dismose of for a church fair. I sent my Gracic out to sell some of them. I told her to go to the business man. She did so.
"He was not in, but the young man, his pariner, was. He bought some of the tickets, and seemed to become infatuated with Gracie.
"The idea of them keeping company was preposterous, and when his visits here became unduly frequent and I began to suspect the true state of affairs, I forbade him the house."

The Boulangists denounce it as such. They declars it an arbitrary, tyrannical and extradectal an attack on the liberties of the people. It is an unjustifiable exercise of power for a partisan purpose, they say, to good the French poposition, supported by a majority of the French Decompt.

They say the signing of the protest against the destruction of the Russian expedition in the Red Sea by the French Admiral was solution of an organization whose objects real particle, because the majority of the true state of affairs, I forbade him the nation in condemning the present Parliamentary recime.

They call upon the people to denounce the outrage against liberty of association based upon a shallow pretense. All opposed to Boulanger defend the government. The Radical-Republican journals approve the act as one of necessity to protect the Republic.

The moderate and conservative organs agree in support of the legality of the measure.

TEN JURORS NOW FOR KEER.

It Took Only an Hour and a Half to Get One Thin Morning.

Extraordinary Term of Oyer and Terminer promptly at 10 o'clock this morning, and began the tenth day of the attempt to get a jury to try Thomas B. Kerr for bribing the Aldermen.

The nine jurors selected out of the 524 talesmen previously examined were in the box, and Assistant District-Attorney-Semple manfully tackled the long roil of talesmen in the hope of getting three more to-day.

He soon achieved some share of success, for a tenth juror was found at 11.30, in the person of Sigmund Eckstein, of 161 East One Hundred and Fifth street, a salesman in a cigar store at 271 South Fifth avenue.

TRACES OF POISON

These Make the Mystery Following John Emmerich's Death.

An Evening World reporter called this morning at 88 Willett street upon the young widow of John Emmerich, whose sudden death the Coroner is now investigating, indioner and the Police.

cations of poisoning having been found in the dead man's stomach. Emmerich was walking along Division street with his newly made wife yesterday afternoon when he suddenly fell in what seemed to be a fit. An ambulance carried him to Gouverneur Hospital, and he died a short time afterwards. Mrs. Emmerich is a pretty brunette of perhaps twenty-one years. Tears stood in her eyes as she told her story to the reporter.

She and Emmerich were children together in a little town in Hungary. Eight years ago when John was seventeen and she was about thirteen, he left home and came to America. He was strong and energetic and upon arriving in the new country he went West.

He located in Cleveland, O., and began to work at his trade, that of altinamith. The two

He located in Cleveland, O., and began to work at his trade, that of altinamith. The two lovers kept up a constant correspondence, and four years ago Rosa, for that was her name, followed her lover across the sea.

She sethied down in New York, where she secured a situation in an uptown mansion. John came East several times to visit his sweetheart, and finally they became engaged.

A month ago John put his business affairs in condition and came to New York.

Rosa had left her situation uptown and went to live at her sater's home, in Willett street. Saturday last was the day set for the marriage ceremony, and that afternoon the couple went to the Polish church in Forsyth street and were married by Rabbi Klimeeky. The newly married couple then made arrangements to go to Cleveland. Two railroad tiskets were purchased and they were to leave last night.

"We started out yesterday merning to make a partine call on my sunt, in Jackson street," said Mrs. Emmerich.

"Before leaving I handed my husband $29, money that I had saved, and asked him to carry it for me. He placed it with other money in a yeilow pocketbook, which he tucked carefully away; in his inside cost pocket.

"We left my aunt's house about I o'clock. At the corner of Division and Montgomery streets he fell in a fit. He was carried to the Gouverneur Hospital and I followed. When I arrived there and asked to see my husband, they told me to go home. I couldn't see him, they said, as he was dying.

"The msn whom I saw told me to come around at 6 o'clock, after an operation had been performed, and I could see him. When I went back I was told that my husband was dead. They handed me a pair of whits gloves, a memorandum book, his woodding ring and only 40 cents in change.

dead. They handed me a pair of white gloves, a memorandum book, his wedding ring and only 40 cents in change.

"My husband bad over $30 of his own money, and with the $20 I gave him he had over $50 in his pocket. When I demanded the rest of his money they told me that I had everything they found on him. He couldn't have lost the money. He didn't spend any while we were out."

Mrs. Emmerich said further that she intended visiting Folice Headquarters and saking for an investigation.

She didn't believe that her husband had taken poison. He was always jolly, and made friends with all whom he met. He didn't have an enemy in the world, and had no cause to take his own life.

The reporter next called at the Gouverneur Hospital.

Steward Wilson said: "I was present when Mrs. Emmerich came in. She did not seem to be excited, but wanted to go to her husband's side. Rea'izing the condition he was in, we persuaded her to go home.

"I was in the room when the man's clothing was searched, and can say that no such pocketbook was found as she describes. Every but of money that he had when brought in here were given to her."

Houre Surgeon McNamara said: "If his wife claims that he had $50 in his pocket we can't help it. We didn't find it on him. Thirty-sight cents was all."

Clerk C, Wilson gave the following inventory of the property found on the man: "One silver quarter, a dime three copper peunles, a photograph of himself and wife, a lead pencil, white necktie, pair of white kid gloves, memorandum book containing memoranda, a gold ring and a gold stud."

Ambulance Surgeon F. Peltier said: "The list given you by Clerk Wilson is correct. I was stud."

Ambulance Surgeon F. Peltier said: "The list given you by Clerk Wilson is correct. I was present at the examination and I know. His wife took his death very coolly. When we told her he was dead she said: 'Is that so?' and immediately went to work to get the property found on him."

The dead man's stomach will be analyzed by a chemist. The traces found were those of arsenic poisoning.
